THE JOURNAL OF PRESBYTERIAN HISTORY (formerly American Presbyterians) is published quarterly by the Presbyterian Historical Society, also known as the Department of History and Records Management Services of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Philadelphia, PA, in cooperation with the Historical Foundation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Memphis, TN. Established in 1901, it is the oldest U. S. Christian denominational historical periodical.

The primary focus of the Journal is on Presbyterian and Reformed history from the seventeenth century to the present as it relates to American religious, intellectual, and social history. Manuscripts pertinent to the Reformed heritage in these areas are welcomed. They will be judged by the editorial committee for uniqueness, readability, critical value, and contribution to American Presbyterian and Reformed historical awareness and appreciation.

Authors are urged to request information regarding the style and format desired for submitted manuscripts. Correspondence regarding the Journal of Presbyterian History should be sent to the Editor, 425 Lombard Street, Philadelphia, PA, 19147-1516.
